RICH MAN IN CHAIN GANG

Governor Brown of Georgia Refuses to be Lenient with W. H. Mitchell.

Atlanta, Sept. 2.—Declaring that there is only one law in Georgia for rich and poor Governor Joseph M. Brown yesterday rebuked the prison commission for recommending clemency to W. H. Mitchell of Thomaston, who disguised as a negro kidnapped and attempted to ravish Miss Lucile Linton, and ordered that Mitchell be taken to the chain gang to serve his sentence.

Powerful Influences Brought to Bear. Mitchell is one of the most prominent men in south Georgia and strenuous efforts have been made to save him from the chain gang. Such powerful influence was brought to bear on the prison commission that it asked Governor Brown to keep Mitchell out of the chain gang.

Gov. Brown Rebukes the Commission.

Rebuking the commission Governor Brown says:

"Should the clemency asked for in the present case be extended there is grave danger that it would bear fruits of sorrow in every section of our state. It would set us an example pernicious beyond compare, an example embodying a daily menace to Georgia's womanhood. It would say that we have one law for the rich, another for the poor, one law for the highly educated and another for those too poor to enjoy the privileges and immunities consequent upon education, one law for the classes, another for the masses."

FIRST UP MOUNT EREBUS.

Antarctic Volcano Climbed Described by Daring Explorer.

When we had settled down in the hut we began to turn our speculative eyes toward Mount Erebus. The ascent of the mountain had been regarded as very difficult, if not impossible; but there was no doubt that if it could be climbed the scientific results would be most valuable, and we decided that the attempt should be made.

I selected Professor David, Mackay and Mackay to try the ascent of the summit. They were to be provisioned for ten days, and a supporting party, consisting of Adams, Marshall and Brocklehurst, was to assist the main party as far as possible. Eventually the whole six reached the top of the mountain. When they reached the crater edge—the first men to reach the summit of Erebus—they found themselves standing on the lip of the vast abyss, filled with a rising cloud of steam.

After a continuous loud hissing sound, lasting for some minutes, there would come from below a big dull boom, and immediately great globular masses of steam would rush upward to swell the volume of the cloud which swayed over the crater. The air was filled with the fumes of burning sulphur. Presently a light breeze fanned away the steam cloud, and at once the crater stood revealed in all its vast extent and depth. It was between 800 and 900 feet deep, with a maximum width of half a mile, and at the bottom could be seen three well-like openings from which the steam proceeded. On the wall of the crater opposite to the party beds of dark pumice alternated with white patches of snow, and in one place the existence of scores of steam jets suggested that the snow was lying on hot rock.

The party ascertained the height of the mountain to be 13,320 feet, and found that the moraines left by some gigantic ancestor of the great ice barrier ascend the western slopes of the mountain to a height of fully 1,900 feet above sea level. As the adjacent sea is at least 300 fathoms deep, the ice sheet when at its maximum development must have had a thickness of not less than 2,800 feet.—Lieut. E. H. Shackleton, in McClure's.

Not a Good Quality Combination.

A man brave enough to hold up a railroad train and all the employees on board, and stand off three guards with a revolver while blowing open a safe at the same time, and then compelling the covered guards to help him carry bags of money up the mountain, and yet fool enough after all to carry off only $65 worth of pennies, leaving thousands of dollars' worth of money of lighter weight, affords a fine illustration of life's ironies. Probably he was more "fussed" than he appeared to be. If the men in the mail car with him while he was blowing up the safe had made a brave attempt to reach the prices almost within their reach, they would very likely have found out that he was nearly as scared as they were, and perhaps have saved their main pride from shame as well as the $65 which was lost.—Waterbury American.
